

I'm not robot

Cabbage patch value guide

Are cabbage patch worth money. Cabbage patch cards value. How much is my cabbage patch worth. Cabbage patch dolls value guide.

1. Coleco Cabbage Patch Kid Red Hair Year:1988 Price:$289.99 2. Xavier Roberts Cabbage Patch Kid Doll Year: 1984 Price: $250.03 3. Triang-Pedigree Vintage Cabbage Patch Kid Doll Year: 1983 Price: $5,500 4. Coleco Cabbage Patch Kids Doll New In Box - Coleco 3900 Rare cabbage patch kids dolls vintage 80's Year: Unknown Price:Unknown 5. Vintage Cabbage Patch Doll "Mac Jamey" Premie Cabbage Patch Kids Twins Boy & Girl Year: Unknown Price:$800 6. Vintage Red Hair Jesmar Cabbage Patch Kid Dotty Year: Unknown Price:$400 Vintage Cabbage Patch Kids collection with diverse items from the 1978-1982 era of $4,500 value up to the rare "Mac Jamey" premie doll sold for $1,000 in 1985. This particular item was listed as being new and still has its original box and adoption papers. Another valuable find is a set of twin dolls, boy and girl cabbage patch kids from the same year, with prices ranging between $450 to $200. For $185, there is a vintage Red Hair Jesmar Cabbage Patch Kid from 1985, priced at $327.23. This doll, named Ruby, features red hair, green eyes, and freckles. It's up for sale on Etsy. Another option is the Dotty Vintage Jesmar Cabbage Patch kid from the 1980s, valued at $235.60. This doll wears its original clothes, has beige hair, blue eyes, and freckles. Its hands are open, ready for a new owner. The Cabbage Patch Kid by Xavier from 1985 is priced at $139. This vintage doll is signed by Xavier Roberts himself, featuring blonde hair and blue eyes, a full dress, and a registration number of 1044. It's up for sale at this price. A rerooted Vintage Cabbage Patch Kid from the 1980s is valued at $300. This doll has popcorn hair in pigtailed tied with ribbons, wears a dress, and has blue eyes. It's made with yarn and vinyl. The Cabbage Patch Kid Boy Doll named Ellis Ezra from 1985 is priced at $175. This patch doll comes in its original box, complete with all papers ready to be adopted. The doll is in great condition. A history of cabbage patch dolls began with a 21-year-old Robert Xavier, an art student who discovered the dolls made by Martha Nelson. Of Vintage Cabbage Patch Dolls: A Comeback After Three Decades Cabbage Patch Kids are experiencing a resurgence in popularity after three decades of dormancy. This nostalgia-driven revival has sparked renewed interest among collectors who grew up with the dolls in the 80s and are now seeking them out. As a result, vintage Cabbage Patch doll values have been reevaluated, with some rare and early models fetching significant sums. The value of these vintage dolls can be categorized into three distinct eras: The pre-Coleco era, when Robert Xavier first introduced the concept; The Coleco-designed era, which saw the introduction of softer bodies and more realistic features; and The post-Coleco era, where the design team at Coleco created even more lifelike dolls with smaller sizes. The earliest models are now worth between $500 to over $2,000. One major factor affecting value is whether a doll still has its original adoption papers and birth certificate intact. These documents can significantly increase the value of a doll, potentially fetching prices in the hundreds. When considering selling your own vintage Cabbage Patch Kid, it's essential to do your research first. Check eBay for similar models and years to determine their market value. Additional factors influencing value include the condition of the doll, its popularity, date of manufacture, and whether it comes with a box and adoption papers. A well-preserved doll with its original packaging and documents is likely to fetch a higher price than one that's been damaged or modified. Conversely, a doll in poor condition may not appeal to collectors and could sell for a lower price. Valuing Cabbage Patch Dolls: Factors to Consider Before Selling or Buying Cabbage Patch Kids Dolls Remain Favorites Among Americans A section of their history has been obscured, however, these dolls remain beloved by both adults and children. In 1992 and 1996, they were featured as mascots for the US Olympic team in Barcelona and Atlanta, respectively. Their popularity stems from a unique bond with the American people, largely due to Martha Nelson and Robert Xavier's distinct personalities. Although not all dolls are created equal, rare Cabbage Patch Dolls can be highly valuable. The value of most dolls lies between $20-$40, regardless of their condition. However, certain collector's items can fetch hundreds of dollars. Those looking to start collecting should consider the Iddy Budds Ranny, which has been sold for up to $375 in perfect condition. The doll's unique feature is its hair. Some rare Cabbage Patch Dolls, such as the Little People Doll, are highly sought after due to their vintage nature and rarity. The 1979 Little People Doll can fetch over $550, while a doll with its adoption papers can be worth over $810. One of the most valuable Cabbage Patch Dolls is the 1985 Teresa Ann, which was sold for $2,000 on eBay. This doll features green eyes, a dimple, and a soft body, all of which contribute to its high value. These hand-signed twins could be worth over $3,500 in good condition, considering their rarity and collectible value. A similar doll was sold for this price last June 2018. The original Little People dolls were handmade by Xavier Roberts and signed with a marker. If your doll has its original paperwork or is signed by the creator, it may be extremely valuable to collectors. In the early days, these dolls were adopted through a hospital called Babyland General, which added to their appeal. Today, a well-preserved doll with all its documents can fetch a high price. However, some Cabbage Patch Kids have little value due to mass production. If you have an authentic, soft, and signed doll from the original collection, it could be highly prized by collectors.